Design Flow Queue - DFQ

Our teams work with a concept of Design Flow Queue - DFQ

There's no limit to how many requests you can make for a design project. For some clients – this could be 5 things. For other clients – it could be complicated requests – this could be one thing. For the most complicated requests it could even take a few working days to get something back to you.

Now when we factor in revisions and edits, the timeline of submissions can change and a guarantee output based on timeline for DFQ may not be possible.

We do have some general guidelines for what you may expect from DFQs.

One DFQ may look like one of the following:

10 customized social media graphics

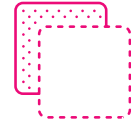

1 double sided restaurant menu card

1 Google Ad in 8 different sizes

2 Mug Design Typographies

1 product background removal

The process of our design submission will start from the 10 social media graphics and when it's ready, submitted and approved by the client after all revisions, we start the next design in the list. These are just guidelines and not exact estimates! The time to receive a design or edit back will vary depending on the complexity of your request. As design is a creative process, each request is different and requires individual understanding and pace which with time will be clearer for each client accordingly.
